

Team Lead Application Development

Role description

A team lead enables a framework in which colleagues are motivated, overcomes conflicts, gives personal feedback and creates a culture of trust. The team lead is responsible for the operation and stability of the applications in his team. The team lead can assume the role of product ownership for one or more squads, provided this is not implemented by a dedicated product owner.

This results in the following distribution of responsibility:

Product owners / Project Manager are responsible for the technical nature of an application or a topic. The key question is: what is being built in which order.

Team Lead PRJ has disciplinary responsibility for one or more squads / projects, each of which can be functionally controlled by a project manager. He / She is responsible for personnel, operations and the organization of procedures / processes within the team / squad.

The other tasks of a team lead include:

- Promote employees and develop their talents
- Mentoring and expansion of existing squads
- Facilitate collaboration between team and product owners / stakeholders / departments
- Personnel planning and support for recruiting
- Hotline and shift regulations, if necessary
- Identify and remove blockers for the team
- Promote agile processes and methods
- Ensure compliance with processes and procedures (e.g. ITIL conformity, ...)
- Recognize conflicts at an early stage and look for solutions
- Conduct staff interviews
- Responsible for stable operation
- Reporting directly to the upper management

Requirement profile

Must have skills:

- Professional experience as a developer
- Bachelor's degree in Computer Science or a related field
- Knowledge of agile methodology (SCRUM, Kanban)
- Very good written and spoken German and English

Nice to have skills:

- Experience as a manager / teamlead / squadlead
- Leadership methodology
